SANDUSKY'S ACTIONS SHOWN IN TWO LIGHTS

ON TRIAL OPENING DAY

Reuters

BELLEFONTE, Pa. The prosecution branded former Penn State University assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky a "predatory pedophile" in opening statements Monday in his child sex abuse trial, saying that his young victims remained silent only out of fear and shame.

In the defense's opening statement in a trial closely watched across the country, Sandusky's attorney Joe Amendola told the seven women and five men of the jury that Sandusky, 68, was a naive man filled with love and affection for young people.

"Jerry Sandusky, in my opinion, loves kids so much he does things that none of us would ever think of doing," Amendola said.

Sandusky faces 52 counts of sexual abuse against 10 boys. If convicted, the former defensive coordinator could be sentenced to more than 500 years in prison.

Eight young men are prepared to testify in Centre County Court in Pennsylvania about how Sandusky befriended and sexually abused them as boys over a 15-year period, according to prosecutors. The men, now aged 18 to 28, will be identified publicly for the first time in court.

In his opening statement, prosecutor Joseph McGettigan III called Sandusky a "predatory pedophile" and urged the jury to listen to his alleged victims in the case, now men, as though they were children.

"You will be hearing the voices of young men, but I ask you to bring insight ... of how children react to things," McGettigan said.

McGettigan added that he would press the witnesses for details in the lurid case only because the jurors needed to hear them. "I must ask, and they must answer," McGettigan said.

Putting up pictures of eight of the 10 alleged victims on a screen, while occasionally jabbing a finger toward Sandusky, McGettigan told jurors that the men had remained silent until now out of humiliation, fear and shame.

As the prosecutor spoke, Sandusky sat silently, hunched forward with his back to the packed courtroom, as ceiling fans whirled overhead.

Amendola called his task of defending Sandusky a difficult one, given the resources of the state and a "tidal wave" of negative publicity about the case.

"This is a daunting task. This is like looking up at Mount Everest from the bottom of the hill, it's like David and Goliath," he told invors Amendola suggested Sandusky could take the witness stand, telling jurors that the former coach would tell them about his youth and how taking showers with other people had been common for people of his generation growing up in Washington, Pa.

ABOUT THE TRIAL

Joe Paterno connection

The allegations brought an ignominious end to the career of Paterno, who recorded more wins in major college football than any other coach. He died of lung cancer in January, about two months after being fired. His widow, Sue, and son Jay may be called as witnesses for Sandusky.

Key witness

Sandusky attorney Joe Amendola has said one of his tactics will be to "destroy" the credibility of former graduate football assistant Mike McQueary and thus raise questions about all the witnesses and victims. McQueary, a key witness, told prosecutors he saw Sandusky assaulting a boy known as Victim 2 in February 2001 in a Penn State locker room. Victim 2 and another boy, Victim 8, have not been found.

Location

The trial has brought a flood of media to Bellefonte, Pa., a town of 6,200 people about 10 miles northeast of State College, the location of Penn State's main campus.

Campus connection

Eight of the 12 jurors, who were picked last week, have ties to Penn State, the largest employer in the area of small towns and farms. But legal and jury experts said familiarity is no guarantee of sympathy for Sandusky and may hurt him if they blame him for tarnishing the university's image.

Tired of slow buses? Here's your ride

GOING PUBLIC

Tracv Swartz

The CTA wants its riders to express themselves about express buses.

The agency is hosting open houses this week about bus rapid transit, an express bus system that typically relies on bus-only lanes and traffic priority for buses. The CTA is considering adding this service on Western and/or Ashland avenues; a pilot is set to begin later this year on Jeffery Boulevard on the South Side.

The CTA has slowly been introducing the idea of bus rapid transit to Chicago. Last week, the Chicago Architecture Foundation, which offers exhibits, lectures and education programs, hosted a bus rapid transit panel discussion that included CTA President Forrest Claypool, Chicago Department of Transportation Chief Gabe Klein and officials from Cleveland, San Francisco and New York. Those cities either have instituted bus rapid transit or plan to soon.

One of the challenges, officials noted, was getting the public excited about taking buses. In Chicago, bus ridership has waned-ridership was down from 327 million in 2008 to 310 million last year-while rail ridership jumped from 197 million to 221 million during the same period.

The bus ridership decline can be attributed, in part, to the 2010 service reductions that slashed 18 percent of bus service compared to 9 percent of rail service. The cuts also claimed nine express lines, including those that ran on Ashland and Western

Those cuts saw some riders shift from buses to rail. But those who stuck with the buses continue to face the possibility of traffic, construction projects and reroutes.

In some parts of the city, such as the area near Ogilvie Transportation Center and Union Station, which serves suburban commuters, it's faster to walk on some days than take the buses, Klein said. CDOT is working on a plan for bus rapid transit in that area with construction to begin in 2014.

This type of relief is needed on Western and Ashland avenues, where the non-express routes crawl along the thoroughfares during rush hour. The No. 9 Ashland route saw 10 million rides last year, second only to the No. 79 route on 79th Street, which saw 10.4 million rides. The No. 49 Western route logged 9 million rides, the third most of the CTA's 139 bus routes.

Theoretically, rapid transit buses would move faster than the now-defunct express buses if the CTA chose to create lanes for buses only and give buses traffic signal priority over cars along those corridors.

The rapid transit open houses will be held Tuesday at the Seventh District Police Station, 1438 W. 63rd St.; Wednesday at Lane Tech College Prep High School, 2501 W. Addison St.; and Thursday at Wells Community Academy High School, 936 N. Ashland Ave. All meetings are slated to run from 5:30-7:30

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note This week: Adams/Wabash

If the Adams/Wabash, Madison/Wabash and Randolph/Wabash stations in the Loop were sisters. Adams/Wabash would be Cinderella. Plans were announced last year to consolidate the Madison/ Wabash and Randolph/Wabash stations into one superstation at Washington Street and Wabash Avenue. That leaves Adams/Wabash station. The station, built in the 19th century and overhauled nearly 25 years ago, has rusty canopies, dirty wooden platforms and graffiti on the stairwells.

Next up: Fullerton station on Red, Brown and Purple lines

Breaking news: It's hot outside. Are you ready to face the rising temps every day, at least twice a day, to cram into steamy train cars and buses on your commute? Before you descend upon Twitter to voice your frustrations, we have a few tips for how to beat the heat on your dally CTA commute. None of this has been co-signed by an actual doctor, by the way. JESSICA GALLIART, REDEVE SOCIAL MEDIA LADY

1. Cat hands

Use the back of your hand when wiping your brow to avoid spreading your sweaty germs via your palm.

2. Skip desperate cramming

This is a simple one: Try to plan your departure time a little better with the help of the CTA's train tracker to make sure you don't absolutely have to cram yourself into that alreadypacked train car to make it to work on time. Leave earlier, then just wait for the next train for a few minutes.

It'll be much less packed and infinitely cooler.

3. Stand clear of the doors

This should be a given, but we assume nothing. When hoofing it on the bus, move all the way to the rear-like the driver says, peoplel-instead of corralling in front of the exit doors. Can you say hot flashes?

4. Speaking of buses...

If you typically ride the train but have a fairly long. walk to or from it, try a new route via a bus or two. Yeah, it might take a bit longer, but that'll be time saved later when you don't have to wipe down due to your half-mile voyage on foot.

5. Dress for success

Despite what missed connections say, most people don't care what you look like on the train in the morning. Save your beautiful coif with a makeshift headband-put all of those free bandanas you've collected over the years to good use-and try wearing light sandals. You can pack your work shoes in a tote and change into them later.

What'd we miss? Tweet your tips for surviving a CTA summer. to @redeyechicago.

Single Chicagoans looking for that random "Call Me Maybe" moment might want to

A recent survey claims to have pinpointed the dog breeds most likely to attract men and women who are on the prowl. According to the poll by Kloof, a mobile app for pet lovers, the familiar golden retriever just might be the golden ticket to a new relationship.

According to the survey, that's the top dog breed to attract men, followed by Labrador retrievers, Chihuahuas, poodles and beagles. For women, it's German shepherds, followed by golden retrievers, Labrador retrievers, huskies and French bulldogs.

The survey results, which do not include information about same-sex relationships, are based on responses from 1,000 pet owners and nonowners ages 18-33.

As the temperatures rise and hook-up season swings into high gear, single Chicagoans

What are your dog deal-breakers when you meet someone new?

If you talk to me in your dog's "voice," I'm out of there. If the dude's dog is wearing any accessory other than a collar. He can't dislike dogs. Doesn't have to love mine as much as I do, but has to be able to tolerate my dog trying to get affection. No deal-breakers, really. I'm married and our dog doesn't like other dogs, so any dog is likely to elicit a bark. She loves people, though!

2 Is it fair to judge an owner by her dog?

No. And I say that as an owner whose dog lunged at a cop on a Segway last week. Totally, High maintenance dog types = high maintenance owners. No. Would you judge a person based on how tall he is or skinny she is? A responsible owner is giving a dog a happy home. Period.

Probably not. I've only been a dog

Diane Lane. John Cusack. "Must Love Dogs." Thoughts?

Never seen it, but "Reservoir Dogs" is a classic.

I don't wanna talk about it.

Bonus points to dog lovers.

The notion that Diane Lane would struggle to find a guy? I don't think so.

are using everything at their disposal to land a date. But is it really necessary—or right to judge potential hookups by the kind of (four-legged) company they keep? That all depends on whom you ask.

Chris Vega, 25, of Lakeview, sees dogs as a powerful tool for meeting women.

"I really think it's the non-creepiest way to meet someone," said Vega, who is single. "It gives a girl an excuse to come up and talk to you."

Vega has a name for taking his Chihuahua, Villa, to popular dog spots such as Belmont Harbor: Fishing.

"She's my lure," he said. "I can just lie on the beach, and she goes up to every group of girls. Even the worst day of fishing is better than the best day at work."

Still, others say that having a dog is no guarantee of getting to know someone.

Martin Davis, 20, of Lakeview, likes to take his Australian shepherd, Lola, to Wiggly Field dog park in Lincoln Park. He hasn't met anyone through Lola yet, but he thinks having a dog does send a message about an owner.

"There is a type of person who is a dog owner," Davis said. "They're friendly. If they can take care of a dog, they have responsibility. It shows you can think of someone other than yourself."

Whether fair or not, many people say you

I really think it's the non-creepiest way to meet someone. It gives a girl an excuse to come up and talk to you."

-Chris Vega, 25, of Lakeview can tell a lot about a person based on the dog she or he owns.

For example, the Kloof survey results showed that while men say they are likely to date a woman who owns a Chihuahua, they often enter into the relationship thinking the woman is "easy" and "dumb." On the dip side, women in the survey were 10 times more likely to view a man who owns a pit bull to be "slimy" or "sketchy" than a man with a Siberian husky. Of course, owners of both Chihuahuas and pit bulls probably would bee to differ.

Kirsten Jones, 29, of Lakeview, admitted to using dogs as a way to judge guys.

"I think it's strange when guys have little fluffy dogs, like those toy ones or Chihuahuas," Jones said. "I think guys don't like those teeny little dogs they can trip over." For women like Lindsey Pearlman of Lakeview, a guy's reaction to her dogs matters more than the kind of dog he likes.

As an owner of a pet-sitting business, she would judge guys before she was engaged on how they would interact with the pets staying at her house.

"If he was scared and couldn't deal with them, or if he was too affectionate, that would make me and the dogs uncomfortable," Pearlman said. "The guy I'm engaged to had a genuine curiosity with the dogs. It's been a joy to watch him make connections with them."

Pearlman said she sees dating as a unique experience when dogs are huge part of your everyday life.

"It's a requirement that has to be filled in a very unforced way," she said. Dogs sometimes can be the opposite of "date bait," at least according to Nate Burrows, 24, of Wrigleyville. His dog, Pearl, is a fairly large German shepherd/black Labrador mix.

"I had a friend wearing all white, and Pearl jumped on her ... so things kind of went the other way." Burrows said.

When Pearl isn't destroying white dresses, Burrows takes her to popular dog spots such as Belmont Harbor, Montrose Beach and Foster Beach.

Dog park regulars such as Mark Darress, 31, of Lincoln Park, see people "date baiting" with their pets all the time, and he said it makes sense.

"If it means meeting other people, why not do it?" he said. "It's tough in the city." HARRY HUGGING IS A REDEVE INTERN. MCT CONTRIBUTED.

THUNDER VS. HEAT

There's a storm comin', hoops fans. This NBA finals, with LeBron James, Dwyane Wade, Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook sharing the court, shapes up to be an explosive showdown. We anticipate a great many dunks and other jaw-dropping plays, but before all that begins, one must emerge from a RedEye faceoff. REDEYE

HEAT: James and Wade: Ready for book club!

NBA FINALS

Miami at Oklahoma City

8 p.m Tuesday, ABC

Game 1

James Harden's beard is something to be feared and admired.

LeBron James' goatee makes .. some sort of statement.

WINNER: THUNDER. LeBron's scraggly mess kind of weirds us out.

Let's see. Thabo Sefolosha had a few highlights during his years as a Bull. And, um, Eric Maynor's dad was drafted by the Bulls in 1979.

People still gravitate to Wade when he comes home. Juwan Howard is a true-blue South Sider. As for Eddy Curry, well, no news might be good news for him in Chicago.

WINNER: HEAT, No contest.

Westbrook likes to celebrate jumpers with a gunslinger routine.

James admires his 3-pointers often. The farther from the basket he is, the more he preens.

WINNER: HEAT. Unlike Westbrook, James at least waits to make the shot to start posing.

Durant needs to loosen up a bit in his recent Sprint spot. But it's fun to watch Westbrook sing the Norman Chrysler jingle.

LeBron seems comfortable making fun of himself for McDonald's, and we could watch Wade trade barbs with Charles Barkley all day.

WINNER: HEAT. They bring the funny more often.

OVERALL WINNER

IT'S A RUNAWAY FOR ... THE HEAT? Can that be right? Sigh, Guess all that's left is to watch it play out.

Cubs should add injury to insult redevesports

They kick and scream. They shout for help from the minor leagues. They can't deal with the pathetic display before "They" are the majority of Cubs fans.

Watching games has been more painful in 2012 than in any other year, they say

Psha! Sometimes I wonder if these fans have had their memories erased.

I agree-this team is horrible. However, people need to understand that this starting lineup consists of players who would be lucky to find the bench on a pennant contender. OK, on any other team not named "Padres."

Plus, this team is lacking one trait to lock itself into Cubs lore: the ridiculously stupid injury. Why would I want this as a Cubs fan? Simple: If it's gonna be bad, why not root for it to get comical?

If the real prospects won't be here for three to five years, let's get bad! '62 Mets bad. '88 Orioles bad, 1800 Cleveland Spiders bad, (OK, I lost you there. Trust me, they were bad.)

You know the type of bad where you see rundowns end in catastrophe? Dropped pop-ups? Shortstops forgetting how many outs there are? (Wait, strike that-already happened.)

The one thing we haven't had this year is a freak injury, and a horrible season without ridiculous injuries is just another blah season in Cubsland.

What gives?!This is an organization whose catcher cut his hand on a table saw. Dickie Noles punched through a wall during a bar fight. Mike Harkey tore his rotator cuff while doing cartwheels during batting practice. Kerry Wood slipped getting out of a hot tub. Steve Trout missed two starts after falling when getting off-wait for it-a STATION-ARY BIKE. For crying out loud, shortstop Billy Jurges was shot by his girlfriend in 1932!

Can't Reed Johnson accidentally light himself on fire? Can't Alfonso Soriano pull a groin playing hacky-sack? We can only hope.

So while you complain about the ineptitude of these Cubs, remember: It could be worse. And more important, why wouldn't you want it to be? Let's have some fun! JOHN DOOLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Lakers star to try his hand at acting

Metta World Peace (above) no doubt is a character, but this might be a stretch. According to Slam Online, the L.A. Lakers forward is slated to play a detective in a Lifetime movie based on a Nancy Grace novel. The mag's report says Peace and Grace (how weird is that in print?) became buds on "Dancing with the Stars." We wish him luck, and we'll see if he fares as well as these other hoops stars-turned-actor standard-bearers.

Rick Fox The ex-Laker has crafted a fine living in numerous roles, including on "Oz," "One Tree Hill" and "Single Ladies."

Ray Allen He wasn't going to out-act Denzel Washington in "He Got Game," but he held his own in a major role.

Kareem Abdul Jabbar The NBA legend shows off solid comedic chops in "Airplane."

Craig MacTavish lasted just one season as Chicago Wolves coach. The team released a statement Monday announcing he's no longer with the team.

That's how many consecutive weeks the Sky's Epiphanny Prince has been the WNBA's Eastern Conference player of the week. She also leads the league in scoring at 25.3 points per game.

According to CBS Sports, the Cubs outbid the competition for the services of outfielder Jorge Soler with those contract terms. Soler, 20, defected from Cuba in 2011.

'My Job Sucks' comic takes his antics to L.A.

By Kyle Kramer

FOR REDEYE

When Addison native Kyle Kinane decided he wanted to do comedy as a student at Columbia College, one major problem stood in the way. "I didn't know where, how you started comedy," he told RedEye. "You were either funny at a bar or you were a guy on TV telling jokes."

Now, after years of being in bars, Kinane has told enough jokes on Comedy Central, "Conan" and elsewhere to feel secure quitting his day job. He chatted from his L.A. home about his time in Chicago.

A lot of your bits are about this sense of failure and sitting at your job and feeling depressed, but now you're becoming successful. Is that changing the kind of stuff you're working on?

Yeah. I don't want to be disingenuous and still bitch about a job because everything I wanted to happen happened and now I get to make a living off comedy. But then, yeah, you definitely have focus on other things to talk about. [Laughs.] The failure part still exists in many other aspects. Maybe not career-wise so much right now, but I would say in romance and general functioning within society—I can still drop the ball on that stuff pretty well.

There are always new ways to fail, I guess.

There are! There are always new ways to fail.

But you were working a day job until pretty recently, right?

Yeah, I always had, I think, a healthy fear of being broke. ... I was always broke, but at least with a day job I always knew exactly how little money I was going to make each week and could plan accordingly. Whereas with comedy, the big fear was you maybe make a decent amount this week but then for three weeks you don't. It's feast or famine. It's kind of like working like a freelancer in that sense, and that's terrifying.

What were you doing right before you quit?

I was working in an office closed captioning television. That was a particularly insulting job. I mean, the job itself wasn't bad—you just sat there and watched TV all day. But to be in L.A. surrounded by people hoping to write their own TV show and being forced to type out somebody else's TV show—which is ultimately, of course, much worse than [your friends'] idea.

What about when you were in Chicago? What kind of jobs were you doing?

Oh man, Chicago. I was delivering pizzas and driving forklifts—a lot of menial tasks. My whole approach was "I'll beat myself up physically, but don't give me anything mentally stressful. Let me listen to music, let me write jokes while I work." That was always my requirement: "You can have my body, but don't take my mind. Don't make me concentrate on something."

Just based on the tenor of your act, did you have any particularly defeating experiences in Chicago where you were like "I'm fed up and I really want to get out of here?"

No, I mean, I was never fed up with the city, so to speak. My whole thing was that I lived at home. I lived with my folks, so I was moving out of my folks' house, and I was like, "Well, I'm either going to move 20 miles east and move into the city and spend all my disposable income on rent and everything just to live a half hour closer and do what I was doing anyway. Or I could just pick up and leave." So that's what I went for.

How did you get started with comedy?

I had always been playing in bands, and maybe it was like an attention thing. I realize looking back I was—I probably still am-incredibly obnoxious, but I like to think I've mellowed out a little bit.

ALBUM REVIEW

Wildlife Pop Stepdad

By Matt Pais

REDEYE SOUND BOARD
When talking about the squeaky pop skills of Stepdad, we must begin at "My Leather,
My Fur, My Nails."
The song appeared on the band's delightful "Ordinaire" EP and, re-recorded with even more heft on "Wildlife Pop," the track hasn't aged a day after no fewer than 20 listens and probably more in the past year or so.

Not everything on the full-length debut for the Grand Rapids, Mich., group (which formed on Chicago's South Side in 2009) hits the same sweet spot. "Mystery in the Faking" and "To Ribbons" just aren't as catchy as the band's best, and the chorus of the otherwise bouncy "Pick & Choose" is such pure sugar it gets stuck in your teeth.

Still, the pleasures crop up enough that this electro-pop tingles with the soothing energy of running a 5K and flopping onto a bed of cotton candy.

Singer ultramark (really, that's what he goes by) and his glorious falsetto blend excellently with the group's skipping melodies on the highly singable "Must Land Running," while "Treasure Hugs" reflects a real knack for turning keyboard-enhanced, borderline 1980s-style music into an epic. By the way: Several tracks, including the shimmering "Show Me Your Blood," maintain the commitment heard on the superior "Ordinaire" (whose great "Jungles" also returns for "Wildlife Pop") of making the words count along with the hooks. You don't need anything to think about while you're dancing, but it doesn't hurt.

RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED HEALTHY MEN AND WOMEN 18-55 YEARS OLD FALL ALLERGY SYMPTOMS

Do You have Hay Fever in the Fall?

Researchers at the University of Chicago are conducting a research study to see whether an experimental nasal spray (not approved by the FDA) is safe and can reduce the signs and symptoms of allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

If you have a history of allergy symptoms only in the fall, but do not currently have any symptoms, and are skin test positive to ragweed you may be eligible to participate in this study. A screening visit, lasting about 2 hours, will take place at the Nasal Physiology Laboratory at the University of Chicago and then two additional study visits will be conducted.

If you are interested, please call 773-702-5889 for more information.

You will receive compensation for your time required to complete the study visits.

SOUND BOARD

Synthetica Metric

By Jessica Galliart

REDEYE SOUND BOARD
No matter what
this review says,
I can guarantee you that devotees of Metric and the band's frontwoman, Emily Haines, will continue to drink the Metric KoolAid. If the band's new album, "Synthetica," were one of the worst albums of the 21st century, Metric fans would insist it was a "growing pains" period, even though the band hasn't changed lineups, styles or even their damn haircuts in a decade

The good news, though, is that the Kool-Aid tastes good. "Synthetica" more than lives up to expectations from die-hard fans, who have been salivating for new material. Announced earlier this year and not officially released until Tuesday, "Synthetica" is the first full-length from Metric since 2008's "Fantasies"—my absolute favorite among their five albums. So what's new with the band? Not a whole lot. And to be honest, that's probably just fine.

The first single from the album, "Youth Without Youth," has practically burned a hole through my speakers. Though it's one of the best tracks, it's also ridiculously misleading. The pace is faster, the guitars thump a little harder, it screams "Party Anthem" and the lyrics don't sync up with anything else on the album. No complaints here with the song itself, but as the first single to introduce us to the new material and as the second track on the album, it's a little disappointing to see the band didn't swing further with this glamrock-heavy style.

Moving on ..., Much of the rest of "Synthetica" feels like a bit of a time warp to the band's earlier albums: dreamy, synthy, mostly upbeat sounds on top of considerably emotional lyrics. Again, that's not a bad thing—"Live it Out" is a classic album, for example. But "Fantasies" seemed like such a departure into the indie-pop arena that seeing them carry that even further with this, their first album in four years, would have floored most fans. Tracks like "The Void," "Speed the Collapse" and "Synthetica" keep the pace moving, but "Youth Without Youth" still stands out.

I'll continue to drink what Metric is serving and spin the new album throughout the summer, but if you're expecting "Synthetica" to be an album full of anthems with a little more of a pulse, you might be a bit disappointed. Don't say I didn't warn you—and please don't come after me, Metric die-hards.

TODAY IN THE YEAR...

1967: The Supreme Court struck down state laws banning interracial marriages.

1978: David Berkowitz was sentenced to 25 years to life in prison for each of the six "son of Sam" shooting deaths that had terrified New Yorkers.

1994: Nicole Brown Simpson and a friend, Ronald Goldman, were stabbed to death outside her Los Angeles home. (Her ex-husband, O.J. Simpson, was later acquitted of the killings in a criminal trial but held liable in a civil action.)

Daaaaaad!

Adam Sandler has more in common with your dad than you might think. His daughters, ages 3 and 6, are embarrassed by his fashion sense-specifically his choice to wear shorts and not pants when he drops them off at school. Sandler told people.com. If he thinks they're humiliated now, just wait until they see "Jack and Jill."

Things do end, and you want them to end when we're running through the finish line and not limping to it and not vomiting or pooping ourselves."

2.7 MILLION

That's how many people tuned in to the Season 5 finale of "Mad Men" on Sunday, thr.com reports. It's the highest-rated finale in series history. Also Sunday, "True Blood" premiered its fifth season with 5.2 million viewers.

"Mad Men" isn't over yet! Turn to Page 26 for your full recap of Season 5.

Keepin' it classy

More embarrassing news from "Jersey Shore" filming: On Sunday. Deena Cortese was picked up from a police station by her parents, tmz.com reports. She'd been arrested a few hours earlier on a disorderly conduct charge. That's on the heels of Jwoww's bar brawl injury and leaked nude pics of Snooki Forget Jack McBrayer. Conan O'Brien's real celebrity guest Monday at the Chicago Theatre was Mayor Emanuel. In a semi-surprise, M-Rahm appeared on the first of this week's four "Conan" tapings as part of the TBS Just for Laughs festival, the Tribune reports. Asked by the Cone to give Michael Jordan a mob name, the mayor responded, "Mikey Six Rings." Hey, not bad!
